RICHARD, '21 SIMON

Editorial

There You Are

Why Editorials? Because they always have been. This is the obvious reason; there is a subtle reason. The Oracle Board had to have something to do. And there you are. We shall now expect close attention to what follows.

EXTINCT

We have not forgotten "The Examination." This pre-historic monster used to live deep within the subteranean chambers of the "Labyrinth of Lansing High." Periodically he came forth and descended upon all "Blitheful Students!"

Now it was observed that this Minotaur of olden days had one peculiar trait. While he was merciless towards those juicy inhabitants of the Labyrinth already mentioned, he did not relish the musty taste of those fortunate grinds addicted to "boning." This highly technical term was formerly used in describing a joy-killing process now obsolete. Indeed if the Minotaur should return today, there are few indeed who would escape his merciless jaws. All would share the same sad fate as those who met their end between his great teeth long ago. From time immemorial he was the curse of the school.

At last the class of '21 in the third year of their sojourn within the Labyrinth, slew the Minotaur and flung his bones into the fiery pit where two custodians, the keepers of the Labyrinth were set to guard the dungeon until the fatal flames consumed the last relics of the monster.

Great was the rejoicing when the glad tidings were spread abroad, and the inmates of the Labyrinth flung open the portals and decked themselves in festal robes.

Like the Dodo and the Ichtyosaur, "Minotaur Examination" was no more.

But now the hearts of the gay revelers have become sad. Fear has dimmed their bright eyes and they dare not thread alone the underground passage of the Labyrinth for a fearful rumor is abroad. Some of the inhabitants of Miss Wilbur's history class, as they were laughing with gleeful frivolity, saw suddenly rise before them the ghost of the vanquished Minotaur. Some days afterwards the same thing happened in Miss Stowe's English class. "The Test" has risen from the ashes of the vanquished "Examination." In vain has the heroic class of '21 battled with this monster who bids fair to become as obnoxious as his predecessor. There is something elusive, something intangible, about this new monster.

Therefore, we the class of '21 do with all ceremony bequeath to the juniors our shining armor and our pointed spears. Seek out the lair of this new persecutor before he becomes too mighty. We give you our benediction,—the fate of generations of seniors is in your hands.

Let us hang a joy wreath on the door of our Cafeteria. What spot is dearer to the hearts of most of us and to the stomachs of all of us than our cafeteria? With what joy we anticipated the rush at the close of the fourth hour classes! With what complete success we laid aside all other thoughts when it came. On the way down, Elsa's anxious voice was heard inquiring, "Where is Barrett Lyons? If he doesn't stay I'll have to eat my lunch all alone. Has anybody seen Barrett!" Arriving at the "eats," with practiced eye we scanned the long shelf of pies and salads. Sometimes it was a piece of chocolate cake far down the line that caught our eye. Who can describe our emotions when one of our dear teachers goaded on by pangs of hunger managed to get around "behind the scenes", and we beheld our coveted piece of cake journeying tranquilly across the room on her tray. Then there are those days of financial embarrassment which will come to all of us. How anxiously we fingered the pennies in our pockets, and how often alas and alack, we would have given a kingdom for two coppers more. Or sometimes when we got as far as the cash register we have had a Canadian dime handed back with a smile, and have had to go on tour to find some friend more fortunate who could loan us a copper. And what a feeling of helplessness came over us when we picked up our tray at last only to see our dish of ice cream or our pint bottle of milk go skidding over the floor. Then there were the teachers, such "honest to goodness humans" as we watched them vainly trying to get on the outside of a baked apple before the quarter bell rang. And always in the background is our good-natured Mr. Leach with his ever-ready smile,—“the man in plain clothes”—who sees that all our temporal and spiritual wants are attended to, and that we are all “good boys and girls.” We see it all in memory! What a family it is,—three hundred every day. Kind, motherly Mrs. Wood smiles at us as we pick up our books to go back to our classes. Once more she has fed “her children.”

Debating is by no means a lost art at Lansing High. Whether it shall become so, depends upon the future. Miss Seitz, Miss Julien, Miss Barber, Miss Olsen, and Mr. Hall deserve great credit for their conscientious work in training the teams, and the teams have tried this year to show their appreciation by winning with the negative team from Battle Creek at Lansing by a score of 2 to 1, tho they lost from St. Johns; while the affirmative won from St. Johns but lost to Battle Creek 2 to 1.

Next year the debates should be announced early in the fall, and everyone in the entire school who can debate at all should try out. If Lansing High is to put out a team that will win against all comers, it must represent the best there is in the school. Especially Juniors and Seniors owe this to school pride. We can't afford to get a black eye in debating any more than in football. Probably more would try out if they could get credit. Some way to give some school credit to the students who do this hard and time-consuming work should be found. Isn't it real work? At this point the faculty are “respectfully requested” to recall how they felt about it “when they were young.”

Peggy of Cumberland

Lucile Harris '21.

Peggy liked boys. When I say liked, I mean she was fond of them in the same way you and I are fond of a good nut sundae or a box of chocolates.

She cuddled small boys, played with those a trifle older and "jollied" the ones older than that. She danced with boys, talked with boys and skated on the nearby pond with boys, and fell in love with none.

For girls she had lots of respect—no love. She liked the girls because she had to and liked the boys because she wanted to. But understand me clearly,—she had absolutely no so-called "Calf-Love Affairs."

I might add that she worshipped her father, who in return lived because of Peggy. All through these eighteen years of Miss Peggy's life, he had been both father and mother to her, for Peggy's mother had died when she was but a few months old—and so, as you will surmise, Peggy had pretty much her own way.

She was pretty and knew it. She had nice clothes and knew it. Peggy was popular and what's more she knew that, too, and why not? It spoiled her not a bit. She grew prettier, had nicer clothes as her father prospered in his business, and became more popular as new boys came into town. One rarely ever saw Peggy with girls. If one did, she rushed madly for a telephone to see whether or not said boys were ill. And so it went. She was graduated from high school with a "list" of honors and an additional number of boy friends and girl friends—the former of the "I will be ever faithful" type, the latter of the "we like you whether you like us or not" variety. Pretty, tomboyish Peggy took all of that for granted and went along in her usual carefree manner.

One evening as Mr. McDonald, Peggy's father, sat in the library reading his evening paper, he was interrupted by the appearance of his sister Samantha. Samantha was an old maid, and what is more she expected to remain so. Pious, prim, church-going, Samantha, for all her religious temperament, was a gossip old trouble maker, according to Peggy. This evening she came to see her brother for the main purpose of discussing her niece. Mr. McDonald arose from his chair awkwardly. "I came," she began, in her usual blunt manner, "to see if something cannot be done for Marguerite. There is not in any part of our town, such a girl. She acts perfectly heathenish, always chasing around with the boys. My dear brother, something must be done or she will be a disgrace to our family. I never saw such a tomboy in my life and it makes my blood fairly run cold when ever I see her coming. Now if I were you I would see that she was sent to some good girl's boarding school where she will be under the influence of respectable girls" and so on until at last Mr. McDonald promised he would do something about the matter. He said, as he stood up and held out his hand, that as soon as Peggy came home, he would say something to her about sending her away to school. But Samantha was not ready to go. He had promised her other things that he would do in regard to Peggy, and he had not always carried them out. She simply informed him she would wait until Peggy returned—to be sure that something was said to her in regard to this matter.

They did not have long to wait. Down the street came Peggy, hands in her pockets and whistling the latest popular song. Through the gate she came and up the steps she jumped, two at a time. Peggy's father said but little and thought a lot. He loved her just as she was, but those not knowing her might think things that were unfair to Peggy. He must send her somewhere—somewhere where there were girls—girls that would perhaps teach Peggy the few fundamental things that she lacked.

Her father and aunt met her at the door—the former with a smile, the latter with a look of grim disapproval.

"I came here today, Marguerite," began Samantha once more, "to talk to you and your father about sending you away to a girl's school. I believe he has something to say to you in regard to this matter."

Peggy gave a startled look at her father and sank down in the nearest chair.

Her father drew up a chair beside her and began in a low tone: "Peggy dear, it's time you were growing up just a little bit. I've tried hard to bring you up to be a clean, wholesome, fun loving girl who, even though she might have everything, still remains unselfish and thinks not of herself but of others who perhaps have not as much as she has. I think I have succeeded far beyond my hopes, but my dear, your aunt thinks it best to send you away to some good girl's school, where, perhaps you will get more good than I could ever teach you here. Your aunt has suggested a good school in the east, but I'm thinking just at present of a small but very wonderful school in the southern part of California. It is called Briar Rose Seminary and is situated near the San Bernardino Mountains, where your mother was born and lived in her girlhood days. Perhaps for that reason you would like to go there. I would like you to go there particularly, because I know the principal; she was a friend of your mother's."

Peggy arose and flung her arms around her father's neck "I'll go Daddy—Oh, I'll go, but I'm afraid I won't like it. I like girls well enough but I can't understand them. I—I—I'll try to, though. Please let me go up to my room now and think by myself. Good-night Daddy dear."

She ran up the stairs and went into her room. She closed the door quietly—very quietly for Peggy—and went over by the window and sat down.

The warm June breeze blew softly in, fanning her face and bringing with it the sweet odor of June roses. Soon she would be leaving her home town in Kentucky to go to the far west. She wondered what she would do among so many strange people and how she would like it. She thought of all the friends she was leaving—friends that she had gone to school with all her life. Finally she undressed, climbed into bed and soon fell asleep.

The next three weeks were busy ones in the McDonald household. Peggy was getting ready to go away to school. There was a trip to Chicago for clothes and a few short trips to visit her friends before she left for school.

The time flew swiftly and soon Peggy was speeding on her way. Her father had sent her off with the same sunny smile and she had promised to act like a heroine, not to cry or feel lonely, and to write as often as she could.

It was a long journey for Peggy, and although she enjoyed every bit of it and made many friends, she was glad to reach her destination, five days later.

She was greeted at the station by a sweet faced middle-aged lady who introduced herself as Miss Marcey, the principal of Briar Rose. She was taken to a pleasant room in the front of the house and had as room-mate a girl from Tennessee. She thought as she took off her traveling costume that she would try to make the best of everything, whether she liked it or not, and that it wouldn't be long before she finished her education and would be able to go back to Cumberland. Then she sat down at the little writing desk and began a letter to her father.

Briar Rose,
September 4.

Dearest Daddy:

Here I am at last, in this beautiful place. It is the loveliest spot in the world except home. The San Bernardino Mountains make me think of the Cumberlands at home, only these are perhaps a trifle higher.

I have a lovely room and a girl from Southern Tennessee for a room-mate. She has black eyes and hair and I imagine is somewhat of a flirt. I've been wondering whether or not we're going to get along, but I guess we are. She's awfully confidential. She has been telling me what a perfectly "ripping" time she had coming here on the train. Her friend, who, by-the-way is an Ensign in the Navy, came with her as far as San Diego, where as she relates, "they parted with much love but terrible grief." He was due to report on duty on the U. S. S. North Dakota and it pretty nearly killed her. Sad but thrilling. Oh yes, I forgot to add, that he has dark eyes and hair

(just the kind that I admire) he is tall and well built, and with a wonderful smile and a good set of teeth. Oh yes, and he never looks at a girl except Virginia, and she knows he's in love with her; anyway she asked him if he wasn't and he said, "Of course". Also he hated auburn hair (a good hint for me) and kissed her hand when they parted at the end of the most perfect day she had ever witnessed. She asked me what I thought of that and seemed offended when I asked her "how she got that way?" Daddy they look at me horror stricken when I use this expression—I can't see that it is bad English.) But I quickly added that I thought it was awfully romantic even though it was a trifle sentimental." He is probably talking to some sweet looking yeomanette at this time. Anyway he ought to be if he isn't. Poor Jinny doesn't seem to know boys as well as I do and besides she is rather silly.

I've got to have my subjects put into schedule order to-morrow morning and I suppose meet my beloved instructors. Will tell you about them later Daddy dear. Just now I'm awfully tired so will say good-night for this time.

Write.

Love to you (and I suppose Aunt Samantha).

"Peggy."

Briar Rose,

Oct. 20th.

Dear Dad:

Oh I've been simply rushed to death and have neglected you just awfully. I never can make you believe how dreadfully sorry I am. We have, during the past month given two benefit parties for the Red Cross, made a trip to Los Angeles to go aboard the U. S. S. Georgia, and given a class reception. We have been kept pretty busy along with our usual routine of work and I have scarcely had time to write to you, to say nothing of my friends back in Kentucky. Tell them I said "Hello," and that as soon as I have a minute's time I am going to write.

We had a wonderful time on our trip to Los Angeles and on the battleship Georgia. Too bad for Jinny's sake it wasn't the North Dakota we visited. As yet I have had "nary" a glimpse of Ensign Graves. My curiosity knows no bounds, and if I don't meet the dear man soon I am afraid I will be over-come from the above. However I might just as well content myself, for I guess I'm never to have that privilege.

Goodness. Here comes Jinny now with a letter from him I'll bet. I'll have to finish this later, for I won't be able to write any more right now.

3 Hours later

Dear Daddy: Here I am again and it was just as I expected. Seems to me the letter was pretty tame, for a man that has been so overwhelmingly swept off his feet. I am beginning to think that Jinny was exaggerating things to me. She is terribly romantic and has quite an imagination for a girl of her tender years. Please write often and thanks for the check you sent me.

Love,
"Peggy"
Briar Rose
Oct. 31

Dearest Daddy: Again I have been rushed to death. But it hasn't been quite so long since you last heard from me, this time. We had a marvelous party the other night. It was the nicest dance I've ever attended. The girls all looked so wonderful in their evening gowns, and I must add that the men in blue uniforms completed the effect. Oh don't get excited! Jinny was there but not with an Ensign. He had something to keep him from coming the last minute, and right then and there I decided I might just as well make up my mind to the fact that I probably would never as much as see him. As for myself, I don't think his excuse was very good but why should I be bothered. Jinny seemed to think it was perfect. He belongs to her, not me, thank goodness! I wonder if he is any different than other boys I used to know back home; we don't see many of the opposite sex here and when we do we nearly always turn and run before we find ourselves rushing up to shake hands with them.

The teachers here are all very lovely—sometimes. But if it was not for Miss Marcey, things would get rather monotonous. Dad! You should see our chaperone. She's a perfect thirty-six lacking about thirty inches. Such an old maid I never saw. And she dresses the way they did when Louis the 14th was alive. I had to go to the city the other day for some things I needed and of course she had to go along. I thought I would die with laughter when we got on a street car and the thing started with a jerk. I turned around to see if she had gotten on without trailing over thirty yards of dress, when down she sat on a man's lap. Of course it was the fault of the car, but just to be real good and mean I couldn't see it that way. She has never invited herself to go with me since and I hope it lasts.

Here comes Jinny with another letter from that dear Ensign of hers and I must close while she pours the contents into my ears. I wonder what he has to say this time. Write to your loving "Peggy".

P. S. His letter stated that he would be here next Friday. "Hur-ray! at last!"

Briar Rose
Nov. 15th.

Dear Dad:

Well at last it has happened. And so have other things. I met Jinny's Ensign and he is really quite wonderful looking. But Jinny is broken hearted for he told her that he was sorry but he could love her not. Poor Jinny! She was stunned—speechless—and gave way to tears of real grief. And can you imagine it? I took him for a walk to the San Bernardino Mountains the afternoon he arrived and when I returned Jimmy was furious. Said if I hadn't stuck myself in, she would still be sure of him, but that I had flirted outrageously with him and therefore she had lost. Oh! I could have shaken her, but I calmly explained that he meant nothing to me whatsoever and as far as I was concerned, never would. But I danced all but two dances with him at the party which we gave for the benefit of the Naval Relief Fund. And Dad, I like him heaps. I believe he likes me too, for he seemed sorry to have to go. He wants to come to Kentucky during my visit home at Christmas time. You see he is going to Norfolk, Virginia, and will obtain a leave of absence. I told him we would be very glad to have him come, and that settled it right there. I know you'll like him Dad because he is, after all, rather nice. It won't be long before I will be home now, so good-bye until I see you at Holiday time.

Love to you, Peggy

Briar Rose

Jan. 7th.

Dearest Dad:

Here I am back once more after a wonderful vacation. So many things happened during that two weeks vacation at home. And to think that I am going to marry Ensign Graves. I know I am going to be quite happy for I think he is just wonderfully nice. Jimmy was real surprised but didn't care at all, which surprised me terribly. But she has traded off an Ensign for a Petty Officer who she says is a wonder. It doesn't seem possible that I could ever have become engaged to him. It is more like a dream than anything else. Somehow I like to picture myself just as I was. But my single days will soon be over. This is an awfully short letter Daddy dear, but I don't feel like writing to-day. You didn't look very well when I was home and I am really worried about you. Take better care of yourself or I shall feel it my duty to leave this beautiful place and come home to care for you myself.

Love

"Peggy"

Cumberland, Ky.

May 15th

My Dear Jimmy:

How often I have thought of you since I left school on January 20th last year. Father died just a week after I came home. It was a very peaceful slumber into which he went, Jinny, and when I go into the same eternal sleep I want it to be just the same way. Poor Dad! He was the most wonderful man in the world. And I want to tell you, Jimmy, that Mr. Graves was wonderful to me during that time. But I've changed my mind about ever marrying him, Jinny. Father's death did that. I never could be happy and besides I have other things to think about now. I told him that, and he went away.

I was sorry for him, but I just couldn't do differently. Father left his entire estate and money to me and just at the present time I am making plans for a boy's orphan asylum which I am going to take charge of. All it lacks is a small sum of money to put it on its feet again and with a few repairs will make a wonderful home for boys that have no relatives to care for them.

I am so enthusiastic over my new work, Jinny dear, and when we get settled and ready for business I want you to come and help me. We need good instructors and you are just the one I need to help me out.

Think it over Jinny and come out here in the mountains. The climate is wonderful and you need never worry about growing old. Probably by the time you are ready to settle down in a home of your own I will be able to find someone to fill your place. I know now that I shall never marry. I am wrapped up, completely, in my work and that settles that question for all times. It is funny how things turn out. Everyone used to think that I would marry before I reached twenty years, but anyway, it hasn't panned out that way and never will, for I won't have time to think of matrimony now. It has been over a year since I left school and I suppose you are ready to graduate. When you have finished and if you want my offer, Jinny dear, come to Kentucky and do something that will be of benefit to a whole community.

Love
Peggy

McDonald Orphan Asylum
June 12th.

Darling Jinny:

I was sorry indeed that you could not accept my offer to come here and help me look after my children. I needed a partner so badly. However the vacancy is filled. I didn't even have to advertise. While I am taking care of my boys here in the only home they ever knew, he will be sailing across the Pacific on our battleships. I am very happy and my partner is happy, also. We both send you our best regards and still offer you a position in our school. I might want you in case "a leave of absence" doesn't come very often.

Love to you Jinny dear,
I am forever, yours sincerely,

Adelphic

The Adelphic Girls feel that they have had a most successful and profitable year. The activities, literary and social, have been about evenly divided throughout the two semesters. In general the programs have been miscellaneous and of various types. After quite a comprehensive study of interesting facts and legends connected with the history of Michigan had been followed, Mrs. Ferry, the curator of the State Museum, gave a very interesting and most instructive talk on this subject. There have been several musical programs of exceptional merit. One hour was spent at a mock banquet at which several members responded to clever toasts. On another occasion a glimpse into the daily life of students at Vassar and the University of Michigan was given us by Miss Judith Jenison. The social activities have taken the form of feeds, held at the homes of different members, where the girls have all had many good times and become more closely acquainted.

Euphronian

The girls of the Euphronian Society feel that they have spent a most enjoyable year besides profiting in the more material things

The programs dealt with the Pilgrims for several weeks and then passed into the study of operas which proved a very interesting subject. Euphronian is fortunate in having a great deal of talent, not only along musical lines but in elocution as well, so that a great variety in programs was offered. The debate with the House of Representatives completely wiped away the disgrace of last year's defeat. The social side has not been neglected either, for in the early fall a feed was held at Loretta Sweeney's and later one was held at Erma Bissinger's.

Altho the Euphronians, at first, were rather stranded by the sudden departure of Miss Julien they soon found out that they had that same energetic, helpful spirit in Miss Campbell, to whom they owe much of their success.

Euripidean

The Euripidean Literary Society has made quite remarkable progress during its two years and a half of existence in Lansing High School. The members have enjoyed many educational as well as entertaining programs during the year, one of which was a highly interesting talk on "Americanization," by Judge Collingwood. Another instructive talk on Michigan, by Mrs. Ferry was enjoyed with Adelpic. There have also been several programs mostly musical given by the members themselves.

The activities have been not only literary, but social as well, several feeds having been held at the homes of different girls.

The society owes a great deal of its success to its faculty advisors who have faithfully guided its undertakings and offered appreciated inspiration.

Cliosophic

The Cliosophic has enjoyed a varied program during the past year. Current events of vital importance were discussed, as well as other miscellaneous and up-to-date topic. Programs of special merit were prepared by the members for Hallowe'en, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

At the Christmas program, a unique mock-banquet was served, followed by toasts. The dinner was served in seven courses, appropriately arranged to represent a Christmas dinner.

Social affairs have not been neglected. At intervals throughout the year feeds and parties have been arranged. A masquerade was held Hallowe'en at the home of one of the members, where a delightful entertainment was provided. The most successful social event was held at the home of Miss Frances Wimble to celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

The Cliosophic Literary Society offers to all the eligible students it can accomodate, excellent opportunities for advancement along literary lines and also fine entertainments along social lines. Initiative is encouraged among the individual members, and as a result, hearty cooperation is given by all. We invite you to investigate, and will welcome into the society as members, representatives of each class.

Frasoris

Frasoris, the oldest of the Literary Societies, has had an extremely successful year. Programs dealing with contemporary dramatists and poets, international affairs, and politics, occupied the first semester under the leadership of Mrs. Marion Towar.

During the present semester the programs have been of miscellaneous nature and very interesting. One enjoyable evening in the form of a feed was held in March at the home of Barrett Lyons. Another one is planned for the end of the year.

As in the other societies, each member on graduating can see that he or she has realized a definite advantage in belonging to Frasoris and the enthusiasm of the new members seems to insure the same result in the future.

House of Representatives

The House of Representatives has always held a leading place among the Literary Societies of this school and through this year's work it has obtained an even more enviable position than that of last year.

As usual the House was divided into Democrat and Republican parties but to add more zest and snap to the meetings an Independent or Socialistic party was formed. Since this third Radical party did not adhere to party lines a much stronger argumentation was created among the other parties in order to convince the Independents.

One's knowledge about the politics of our government, both National and State, is very greatly increased by membership in the House. However, more important, is the practice in public speaking obtained by all since every member is in every regular program. These programs usually consist of the introduction of various bills and the attempts to pass them through the House.

Heated arguments and lively discussions are natural and enjoyable consequences of such methods and may be well proved by the fact that of the five male interscholastic debaters of the year two of them are members of the House.

Among the several bills introduced before the House are the following more important ones. "The Repealing of all War Time Legislation concerning Taxation." "The Independence of the Philippines." "Election of the President by a Direct Vote of the People." "The Adoption of the League of Nations."

Summing it all up the House of Representatives has just passed one of the most successful and useful years that it has ever known.

Master

Helene Gillette, '21

Oh Master! play upon my Harp
Caress the quivering strings
Silence the discord of mortal art
Oh ope Life's hidden springs

Oh Father, I am but Thy thought
An instrument of thine
Call forth the music sweet and soft
Make Harmony sublime.

Oh God, there's peace in every part
There's joy and Love Divine
Who but Thou canst touch my Harp
And thus enrich mankind.

Oh Thon, whose music fills the sphere,
All nature bows to Thee
And worships each succeeding year
Thy immortality.

Oh Master! play upon my Harp
Caress the quivering strings
Silence the discord of mortal art
Oh ope Life's hidden springs.

Junior Exhibition

On February 20, 1920, the Class of 1921 had the pleasure of presenting its Junior Exhibition. "THE LITTLE MINISTER" by James Barrie was the play chosen and the cast, picked and drilled by Miss Derby, very successfully played their parts.

Almost everybody is familiar with the story of Babbie, who, tiring of her life of sheltered care, runs away to a gypsy camp. She astonishes the good people of Thrums, a little Scotch village, leads them to rebellion and upsets things generally. She angers Gavin Dishart, the Little Minister, who finally falls in love with her and marries her much to the dismay of her guardian, Lord Rintoul.

Erma Bissinger as Babbie, won the hearts of her audience from the first. Lee Weston, the Little Minister, made a splendid preacher. We shall not soon forget the tears of Estelle Raymond, who as Nannie Webster, took the part of an old woman so well, that her audience was deceived.

The cast is as follows:

Babbie	Erma Bissinger
Nannie Webster	Estelle Raymond
Jean Baxter	Dorothy Lott
Rev. Gavin Dishart	Lee Weston
Wearyworld	Carroll Weed
Tammas Whammond	Henry Duff
Peter Tosh	Charles Silsbee

The Pageant of the Pilgrims

The History Department very delightfully entertained the students at our Thanksgiving chapel by "The Pageant of the Pilgrims". This was presented twice before the students and once in the evening for the public. The success of the Pageant was due, in a large measure, to the interest and labor of Miss Wilbur, who directed it.

The Pageant begins with a processional headed by the good Governor Bradford, followed by the Pilgrims, Indians, Hunters, Spectres of Pestilence, Cold and Famine, and the Adventurous Spirits.

Two symbolic figures, the Questioner and Interpreter, hear the sounds of these slow treading feet, as of Pilgrims journeying across the continents. They also detect the more serious motive, that of finding a land of religious freedom.

In the first Episode, we see the Pilgrims in Scrooby England. Elder Brewster is in danger of arrest. The Pilgrims then decide that they must seek another land.

The Questioner and Interpreter relate the troubles of the Pilgrims while in Holland. Finally they board the ship Mayflower, and the journey to America begins.

Episode two shows their landing in America and their efforts towards friendliness with the Indians. Three spectres, Famine, Cold, and Pestilence show the hardships of the first winter. The Indians give a war dance while Corn Sowers strew the graves, to hide them from the Indians.

The Third Episode shows that, even in the saddest period, the Pilgrims celebrate Thanksgiving. The elders go to the house of worship, and the young men and the maidens are discovered by Myles Standish having a frolic with the Indians. As he is about to mete out their punishment, the ship "Fortune" is discovered in the harbor, and Robert Cushman comes to the settlement, bringing their charter with him. Adventurous spirits lure the Pilgrims on to the Future, farther west along the road of time. The Interpreter then tells of the coming of more immigrants, the Pilgrims of a later day. The Goddess of Liberty enters and a group of immigrants follow her. The Interpreter says—

The wheel has turned full circle and the road

The Pilgrims trod now winds about the earth,

A way for all the peoples of the earth,

A bond of brotherhood for all the world.

The Pageant concludes with the coming of the Spirit of Brotherhood, who takes her place by the side of the Goddess of Liberty. The Curtain falls, while all are singing "The Song of The Brotherhood."

Senior Class Play

On Friday, April 15, 1921, the Class of '21 again displayed their dramatic powers when the educational play, "Light" by Cathryn Brice, was presented at the Gladmer Theatre. Any City, Charles Betts, having decided to cut the school appropriations, falls asleep and has a dream in which Education, Leila Harris, comes to him and shows him the various steps in education, from the experience of a caveman to a possibility of a future school. Awakening from his dream Any City decides not to cut the appropriations but to always support the schools.

All parts were played exceptionally well but special honors must go to Charles Betts and Miss Leila Harris, who handled their parts with ease. The cave-man scene, the Indian scene, the feudal scene, the three school scenes, the corn grinding scene, the Greek dancers, and the Roman soldier scene, all impressed the audience.

This play was very successfully staged under the able instruction of Miss Mary Derby, to whom we owe all of our exhibitions of dramatic talent. Throughout the play Geraldine McHenry and Miss Crabbs accompanied the players on piano and violin.

Lansing High School Alumni Association

By Walter S. Foster, L. H. S., '96, President

The day has long since passed when this Association served only a social purpose. Merely to meet school day friends would indeed be sufficient justification for such an organization, for probably not till graduation and the attendant separation of familiar faces does the student begin to realize that "there are no friends like old friends." But if it be true that the Association was originally founded on such a motive, it is equally true that its development has been such that its scope is now much broader and its field relatively more important.

Rendering financial assistance to needy graduates desiring a college education is the most practical work now conducted. By means of the College Benefit Club, a subsidiary of the Association, loans are made to worthy graduates for further education in such institution of higher learning as the student may select. The sum contributed by the Alumni has been greatly augmented by donations of the undergraduates from their class plays, and Oracles, so that the fund now totals $2,000.00. It is hoped that this amount may be greatly increased in order that more students may be assisted and that the amount loanable to any one student may be commensurate with the recent increased cost of college residence.

The Board of Control is very anxious that a Scholarship Fund be provided whereby a suitable amount may be annually awarded, not loaned, on a scholarship basis of need, excellence and diligence. Plans for raising such a fund are under consideration.

In a broader sense the members of this Association have proven their loyalty to the public schools by their interest in general school affairs, exhibitions, plays, contests, school buildings, their locations and equipment. Of late the members have taken a more active interest in the elections to the Board of Education. Alumni of the city schools should be encouraged to seek membership on that Board. All in all the Alumni Association of the Lansing High School is serving some splendid purposes, but manifestly there is much work ahead yet to be accomplished.

DEBATING

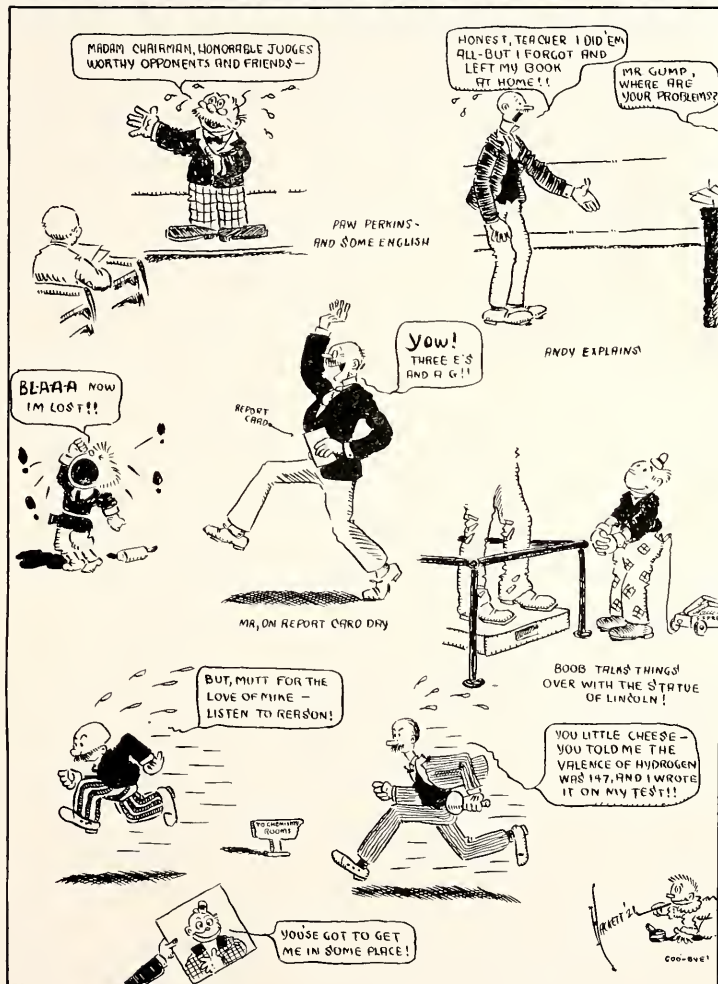

In winning two out of four debates this year, the High School debating team has honorably upheld the laurels of the Red and White, and at the same time, has kept the record set by the team of '16—that of not falling below the fifty-fifty mark in the final debating score. Although we have not had many debates this year, yet our two dual debates with Battle Creek and St. Johns, were doubly interesting.

Our negative team, composed of Abie Simon, Florence Fuller, and Carlyle Montgomery traveled to Battle Creek for the first debate of the season. Although they put up a stiff fight, this team lost by a 2-1 count. However, this defeat was wiped out by the victory of our affirmative team, composed of George Cottrell, John Molitor, and Dennis Flaker, over Battle Creek's negative team, on the home platform. Then again the laurels were reversed when our affirmative team went to St. Johns, and lost, 3-0: our negative winning over St. Johns here, by the same count. The season's question for debate was: Resolved—That the United States government adopt a system of compulsory arbitration in labor disputes. (Constitutionality waived).

The class of 1921 may be more than just "interested" in this year's debating team, inasmuch as four of the six,—Abie Simon, Florence Fuller, Dennis Flaker, and John Molitor, are all Seniors. In spite of the fact that these four will be lost to the school for next year, the outlook for debating is encouraging and we hope to see added interest and backing for the team on the part of the student body.

IF THE FUNNY-PAPER PEOPLE CAME TO U.S.

A Sonnet

By Florence Fuller, '21.

Last night I watched the quiet sky bend down
To kiss the weary careworn earth good-night,
Then like a mother first put out the light
And from the World's hard forehead smooth the frown.
Then came strange thoughts I ne'er had known before
That drove me to the woods where lost winds wail;
The dark pines sobbed to hear their mournful tale,
And with a smothered cry of sullen pain
The great heart of the sea broke on the shore.
Then all my soul cried out with bitter pang
That life has naught to give but grief and pain
And all our human effort is in vain.
But no!—for as I spoke, a little bird
Among the fallen leaves, awoke and sang.

A Senior "If"

If you, when famous High School walls surround you,
Can gaze and not feel mingled awe and fright,
If you can close your purse when all around you,
Are paying dues or borrowing cash outright,
If you, when standing by "Abe Lincoln"
Can hear the tardy bell begin to sound,
And still remember that to little Freshmen
You with dignity and stateliness abound;

If you can keep your mouth shut when a Junior
Does speak to you in taunting sort of way
About our sad Basketball disaster,
Without a-talking "Track", and "Hop", and "Play";
If you can notice those impertinent Sophomores
That seem to be so ignorant—such pests—
If you can take without a bit of flinching
Those awful, wicked, fearful History tests;

If you can go to see our "Big Red" team
Play in the freezing cold, and mud, and rain,
And never yell, nor get excited, nor scream,
And vow that you will never go again;
If you can chew a stick of Beechnut
In the Auditorium, and not get caught,
The Class of '21 will not endure you,
And what is worse, you'll be a "nut".

Ruth F. Jennings, '21.

Music

The music department this year has increased in popularity judging from the number of students enrolled in all of its branches. The orchestra is continually being called on to appear on the chapel programs and many outside entertainments. The band appeared at some of our basket ball and football games to lend pep.

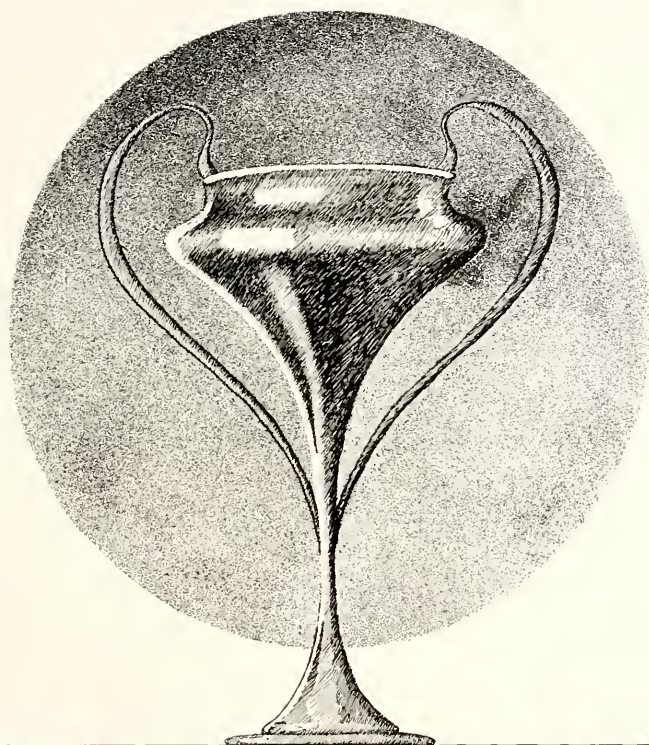

The Glee Club in past years has presented a comic opera as a feature of the annual May Festival. This year however the opera, "College Days" was presented on April 28, 29, and 30. This opera was written by John Wilson Dodge and May Hewes Dodge and the Glee Clubs had the privilege of giving it its initial performance.

All these departments of music gave a delightful program in chapel just before the Thanksgiving vacation. This year was the first year that the music department put on a program by itself, and it was so well appreciated that no doubt the idea will be followed in the succeeding years.

Last year the Glee Club participated in the State music contest and won the cup. This year the program of participants has been enlarged. A double quartet, boy's quartet, girl's trio, solos for violin, piano, and all four voices and ten piece orchestra were taken to Mt. Pleasant to win again the cup. The choruses assisted the State Contest group in making up a night's program during the May Festival.

As a whole the music department of the Lansing High School is becoming a very important factor in school life.

Football

Another football season has closed with our Big Red Team carrying away the State Championship honors for the fourth year in succession. This is a season worth remembering, not only because we again won State Championship, but because when the occasion arose, and the spirit of the team and the student body supporting it was weighed, it was not found wanting. For the first time in the last four years of football history we were defeated; both the team and the students withstood this defeat nobly. The crowds that rushed to every home game to support the players with their enthusiastic yells, and the final outcome is proof enough to show that L. H. S. has the right kind of spirit.

The schedule for the season was good; five out of nine of the games being played at home. One of the most interesting games was the one played with Northwestern. As the representative teams thru out the State had been defeated at least once, the athletic authorities at the University of Michigan sent telegrams to the various leading schools to inquire as to what three teams they thought to be the best. From these inquiries three schools were chosen to play for the Championship, the teams representing Detroit Northwestern High School, Muskegon and Lansing High. Therefore on Ferry Field at Ann Arbor, L. H. S. played a post season game with Detroit Northwestern, and defeated them by a score of 19-7. Muskegon refused to play the winner, so the championship was then awarded to Lansing. An additional post-season game played, was the one with Hyde Park, Chicago. In the pouring rain and ankle deep in mud on a rain-drenched field our team tied their opponents. In spite of the continual downpour of rain about 5000 rooters turned out to witness the struggle. It was later disclosed that in reality we had played the University of Chicago, so our team had one more victory added to their list.

In the picking of the mythical all state squad selected by Richard Remington of Detroit, Lansing was honored by having Neller, Kipke and Brown chosen on the first team; Captain Rollie Richards and Bob Thayer were placed on the second team.

At the close of this most successful season our players were showered with honors. They were banqueted by the Accelerator Club of the Reo Motor Car Co., which also presented them with paper knives of bronze as gifts, by the Merchant's Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, by Lodges number 33 and 66 of the Masons, by the Kiwanis Club and by the Knights of Columbus. The City Council presented them with a gift of twenty dollars to be used as they saw fit.

Basketball

At the beginning of the basketball season, Lansing perhaps had the best material in the State, but for some unknown reason the team did not play at top form at all times. We had very efficient coaches in Mr. Long and Mr. Drake and to their untiring efforts do we owe our success. We had a mighty fast pair of forwards in Capt. Richards and "Stub" Kipke with a fine substitute in Fitzpatrick. Capt. Richards one of the best dribblers in the State, continually showed his skill and in all games carried away the lion's share of points. "Stub" Kipke at all times played a steady brilliant game and deserves high credit. Johnson was everything one could expect, a dribbler, a basket-shooter, and a defensive man. In "Hoss" Schultz and Ed Roh, Lansing had a very powerful set of guards who continually worried their opponents. Although Schultz did not play until the second semester yet he certainly must be commended for his defensive work. Ed Roh continually displayed the old form of last year and we look for greater things from him next year. Neller, as substitute guard, is a whirlwind on his feet, and if he had had a little more seasoning, he would have undoubtedly held a regular position on the quintet. "Jimmie" Duncan completes the list of the first team and it must be said that he is fast and no doubt next year will show more form than ever. Perhaps the best game that this quintet played was with Pontiac in which all the "Pep" in the world was shown and one of the fastest games played here was seen.

Interclass Boys' Basketball

This year the Interclass championship, formerly held by the class of 1921, went to the Juniors after an unusually close season. The last year team started out with quite a lot of pep, which made things look as if the championship would again be awarded to 1921. The Juniors, however, with their fast team managed to break the winning streak of the Seniors, and they took the banner from the very nose of the Senior team.

The Freshmen are to be congratulated on having such a good team. For the first year team, they showed good form and a great deal of pep. We predict that in future years the regular line-up will get a lot of its material from Captain Maatsch's team.

The record is as follows:

	Won	Lost
Seniors	5	4
Juniors	7	2
Sophomores	3	6
Freshmen	2	7

Girls' Basket Ball

The Girl's Basket Ball season closed this year with the Seniors as champions. The final games were scheduled and played the two weeks previous to spring vacation. The Seniors in each case won by a fair score. There was an unusual amount of enthusiasm shown by the girls this year.

The Senior team was not a one-woman team as might be supposed on seeing it for the first time, but won its points on account of the splendid team work, due undoubtedly to playing so long together. Their signals still remain a puzzle to the under classmen.

A great many girls turned out at the try out (they always do), but the Freshmen seemed to retain enough interest to hold a sufficient number of girls for two teams. The Freshman team far excelled the Sophomore or Junior team in their speed, accuracy, and fight.

No definite teams were chosen, but most of the same girls played each game. The following girls composed the championship team: Marjorie Parker...F. Reva Leach...F. Mildred Kyes...R. C.

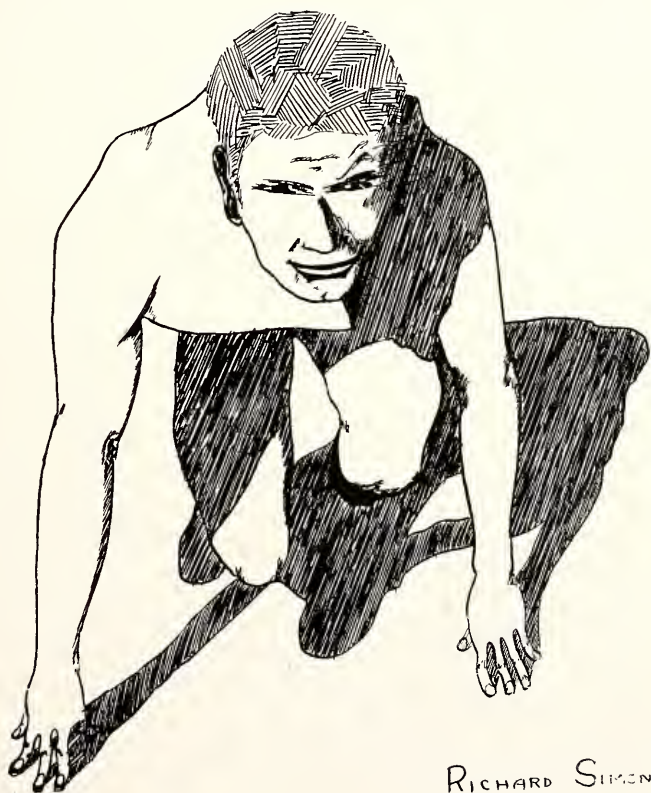

Thelma Stegeman...J. C. Dorothy Vandercreek...G.

Lois Manning...G.

Substitutes:—F., Eva Le Furge; R. C., Frances Petrie; G., Bernice Fowler.

The girls are very much interested in their only athletic sport and next year in addition to basket ball they sincerely hope to have inter-class Track.

Track

Seniors win the inter-class track meet. Thus started the 1921 season of track in L. H. S. This undoubtedly was the most spirited class contest ever held due possibly to the desire to win first honors on the Longyear Cup, presented by Frank E. Longyear. To add to the contest a gold medal, a silver medal and a bronze medal were given to the first, second, and third individual point winners. Wilcox Senior, and "Doe" Clevenger, Soph., were tied for first with 13 points each to their credit. But since 13 is "Doe's unlucky number, he lost the toss-up and Wilcox was awarded the gold medal, "Doe" taking the second one. "Bob" Herman, one of the twins (we don't know which) took the bronze medal with 10 points to his credit.

Score:— Seniors, 35; Junior A, 28; Soph., 27; Fresh., 17; Soph. B, 6; Junior B, 2. The relay was very closely contested the Junior A's and Seniors changing lead twice, the Juniors winning during the last 50 yards. In the mile run Tichrock continually held the lead throughout the race and during the last lap it became a regular contest when Galbraith and Monroe closed up on him and crossed almost neck and neck.

Clevenger ought to make his opponents put forth their best efforts in the 100, 220 and hurdles while Alderman is no mean runner at the 100 yd. dash. Alderman is also a broad jumper. Cannon, the dusky athlete, will run the 220 and 440 and ought to give every opponent some mighty fine competition. "Spike" Johnson, he of football and basketball fame, will enter in the 440 and half where he ought to establish a new high school record. "Stub" Kipke will also do the 440 and half with the shot put thrown in. All right, Stub, old fellow, let's see you tear. Scharr and Oade, Freshmen wonders, are also listed; Scharr, to enter in the high jump and hurdles, and Oade will compete in the discus, 440 and half. We have two very promising milers in Galbraith and Tichrock and we will not be at all surprised if they win at the meets. Wilcox, the terrible farmer from Holt and interclass point winner will compete in shot, discus and 220. Listen, Howard, if you don't win, we'll send that little four foot six Norwegian down and you know what will happen. Bob Hermann will endeavor to break the high jump and pole vault record. The relay team is composed of Clevenger, Alderman, Cannon, and Johnson which ought to be a mighty fast crew.

Chronicle

Florence Fuller

Should you ask me whence these stories,
Whence these wondrous tales and marvels,
With brave deeds of valor painted,
With their feastings and their war dance
Filling every heart with wonder,
I should answer, I should tell,—
“In the heart of a great Village
Stands a wigwam, high and mighty,
Where the tribes are wont to gather
When the harvest moon is waning.
Thus, according to their custom
In the fall of 1920.
Many moons ago, assembled
Four great tribes unto the wigwam
There to learn from their great chieftains
All the wisdom of the ages
All the knowledge of the old men.

Warriors came bedecked with feathers
With their tomahawks they gathered.
Gentle maidens too came thronging,
Gazed with pride upon the warriors
Longed to aid them in their battles.
Gitche Manito, the mighty,
He who guided all their footsteps,
Smiled upon them as they entered,
From his high place in the wigwam.

Would you know what things befell them
While they sojourned in the wigwam
From the seventh of September
To the time of graduation?
Listen then to deeds of greatness
To the story of the tribesmen
Who were gathered at the wigwam.

Lo! the harvest time had ended
Gitche Manito the mighty,
He the Spirit of the wigwam
Summoned all the youths and maidens
From the hunting grounds of pleasure
Summoned them unto his wigwam
To the lodge of hoary knowledge.

First the Ottawas, the freshmen
Came into the lodge of wisdom
Filled with foolish thoughts their minds were Youngest of the tribesmen were they.
Then the sophomores, the Ojibways,
Answered to the Spirits' mandate
Lording o'er their weaker brethren,
Scorned the Ottawas their brothers.
Pottowatomies, the juniors,
Came and took their place with laughter
While the Hurons,—sage and warlike,—
They the bravest of the warriors
Came with dignity of bearing
Thus proclaiming they were seniors.

But one timid Huron maiden,
G. McHenry, white Owl's Feather,—
At a placard was seen gazing
That was posted at the entrance
Gazing at a piece of cardboard
That beside the door was posted.
Shall I tell you of this placard—
What thereon was plainly written?
'Twas not for the lordly Hurons
Gitche Manito had placed it.

He had posted there directions
For the Ottawas, the freshmen.
And this maiden of the Hurons
Pondered o'er and o'er its meaning
Scanning anxiously the placard
That beside the door was posted.

Oct. 15—

Then there came a day of gladness
'Twas the fifteenth of October,
And the lodge was left deserted.
Gone were all the youths and maidens.
And the chieftains too had left it
For they held a solemn council
In a distant lodge assembled.
Then the happy maidens frolicked
Round their braves and sang with gladness.
Silent stood the lodge of learning.

Oct. 19—

And it happened as the Hurons
Were in Physics class assembled,
That a strange and mystic powder
Scattered by some evil spirit,
Spread amongst the hapless victims
Caused their necks and arms to redden
With the colors of the sunset.

Oct. 23—

On this day eleven warriors
Chosen for their might and valor
Decked with war paint and with feathers,
Sounded forth their fearful war cry
Startled all the air of Lansing,
Rallied all the braves about them.
For the fight they knew was coming.
Mighty warriors from Grand Rapids
From a rival lodge assailed them.
Tore the scalps from their opponents
And victorious laid them smiling
At the feet of radiant maidens.
Then a mighty shout ascended
And the warriors danced their war dance
And the happy Indian maidens
Showered smiles upon their heroes.

Oct. 25—

Lo, when Monday came and once more
All the lodge was filled with people,
Erma's voice, the Laughing Water's
Was not heard among the others
For so loud she cheered her warrior
At the battle just recounted
That she found that all remaining
Of her voice was just a whisper,
Was the ghost it left behind it.

Oct. 28—

On this day and time it happened
That some Hurons had been loitering
Had been slowly promenading
When 'twas time they had assembled.
Full of wrath this filled their chieftain
Thru his teeth he buzzed and muttered
Words of anger and reproaching.
Then appeared the Hurons truant,

With their heads in guilt hung downward
With their guilty heads bowed meekly.
And their chieftain fiercely frowning
Sent them down to the great Spirit
Sent them to the Chief of Chieftains
Gitche Manito, the mighty.

Oct. 29—

On this day in solemn council,
All the tribes were met together,
Cheered their warriors, mighty heroes,
Who so well had fought in battle.
At the daybreak on the morrow
All these warriors, brave and valiant,
Went to raid Ann Arbor's wigwam,
Battled with her fiercest warriors
On a strange and foreign meadow,
Bore their scalps away in triumph.

Nov. 5—

And it came to pass
That the Hurons, grave and thoughtful,
Pondered long, and pondered sadly,
O'er the task which had been set them.
Each poor senior from his version,
Halting stumbling prose translation.
Must transcribe it into meter,
Put it into flowing rhythm
Such as Virgil once had written.
Ah how many youths and maidens
Did invoke the gentle muses
Did beseech them with their weeping
Prayed to them with hearts of anguish.

Nov. 11—

Ah how well do we recall it,
On this bleak day in November,
How the tribes commemorated
All the valor of their elders,
All the courage of the old men
Who on foreign field had battled
For the freedom of their children.

Nov. 16—

On this day the tribes assembled,
Gathered in the spacious wigwam
Gathered in the Lodge of Learning.

And there rose from out their number
Those who knew the art of music
Those who sang and played the sweetest
And they entertained their brothers,
Sang for them their sweetest music
Soothed their warlike hearts with singing.

Nov. 20—

Once again the war cry sounded
And the young braves danced the war dance,
Bravely then they met the warriors
From the lodge called Detroit Central,
Swung their tomahawks and shouted,
Slew the strongest of the invaders.
Great rejoicing met the heroes
All the tribesmen met together,
Met upon a grassy meadow
Where they cheered the bravest warriors.
And the great men of the Village
Made a feast day in their honor.
Thus they showed their approbation,
Showed their good-will towards the victors,
Towards the warriors of the wigwam.

Nov. 23—

In one corner of the wigwam
Manuscripts of picture-writing
Were collected for the scholars.
Here was held an exhibition
Of the Pilgrims and their dwellings.
All in miniature was modelled,
And the Huron maids had labored
Dressing dolls as Pilgrim mothers,
While the young men of the Hurons
Had with cardboard represented
Curious wigwams of the pale-face,
And his meeting house and chapel.

Dec. 16—

There were some among the tribesmen
Who were noted for their wisdom
And their thunderous oratory.
Thus it happened in December
That the warriors and the maidens
Came to hear their chosen speakers
Meet their rivals in debating.

Grim and fearful was the conflict.
Then the tribesmen cheered their heroes
Cheered with mighty voice the victors.
Dec. 17—

Lo! a miracle,—the chieftains,
They the learned of the wigwam
They the leaders of the warriors
And the gentle Indian maidens,
Gave a program in the wigwam
In the spacious Lodge of Learning.
And the four great tribes assembled,
To behold the wondrous talents
Of these leaders of their fortunes,
Mighty chieftains whom they honored.

Jan. 3—
Now the Hurons were assembled
In the presence of their Chieftain,
He the ruler of this great tribe
Who were now once more united
After days of sweet vacation,
After days of recreation,
There resounded thru the wigwam
Sweetest sounds which were repeated,
Sounds as of a bell in motion.
Long the chieftain gazed about him.
Lo, he spied a Huron warrior
Whom his intuition told him
Was the brave who made the music,
Was the owner of the cow bell.
Gitche Minito was waiting
In his hall of lordly spaces.
Mighty Chieftain sent this warrior,
Sent this brave with music haunted
Sent this warrior with his cow bell
To the waiting Manito.
Words portentous then were spoken,
Spirit of the brave was shattered,
Sense of music fled his soul.

Jan. 15—
Here the Hurons made a feast day
For the maidens and the tribesmen
For the braves and timid maidens.
Of this band of noble Red men.
All the night was spent in dancing
And in feasting round the campfire

While the freezing North Wind joined them
Sang with pleasure in the tree tops
Whitened with the breath of Winter.

Jan. 27—

Fatal day for lazy warriors,
Fatal too for listless maidens!
Gitche Manito the mighty,
He the spirit of the wigwam,
Ordered all his mighty chieftains
That each member of the four tribes,
That each Indian maid and warrior
Should receive a card with figures,
Marvelous and mystic figures
Which should seal his fate forever
In the meaning of the symbols
Borne upon its shining surface.

Mar. 2—

All the junior tribe of warriors,
Pottowatomies in costume,
Gave a pantomime this evening
In a lodge where plays were given.
And the other tribes attended
In their best and choicest deerskins,
In their dress of many colors.
All the old men from the village,
With their squaws and wee papooses,
Came to view the young men's pleasure
Came to see the maidens frolic.

Mar. 9—

And it came to pass in due course
That the youngest of the four tribes,
That the Ottawas, the freshmen,
Won the prize of beads and wampum
That was offered by the Chieftains
For the best "snaps" of the tribesmen.

Mar. 29—

On this day the stately Hurons
Put aside their grave demeanors
And their dignity of bearing,
Dressed themselves in wild apparel
Frolicked round about the wigwam
Round about the Lodge of Learning
For it was their day of Folly

And they filled it with abandon.
Now the time speeds onward swiftly
Towards the day of graduation
To the day of their Commencement,
Ye who read these lays of valor
Read these deeds of heroism
Learn how Indian maids and warriors
Labored in the mystic wigwam
Labored in the Lodge of Learning.

History of the Class of 1921

Septemeber 1917. A very timid group of freshies we were that entered L. H. S. in that month and year. "Why rob the cradle," "They're getting smaller every year." and "Some nursery, this" were heard on every side. But we were pretty much like all freshman and it wasn't long before we had discovered that teachers were not the impossible ogres we had expected, that it was best to be discreet when Sophomores were around and certain other formulae for general use. We were late in getting organized on account of the "coal vacation" but finally did, choosing Frank Mutz as President. At this time committees were appointed to form class by-laws which were to be: Colors, Garnet and Gold. Motto, "Aim high and get busy"; and our yell. In June a fine picnic was held at Pine Lake, which about one half the class attended.

Our Sophomore year started off in a whirl of work with little relaxation until October when our class elections were held. Under the presidency of Stanley Fulton we were guided thru our second year in Lansing High. None of us will ever forget that famous Monday, the eleventh of November with its Thursday forewarning. The teachers have often expressed the wish that the school could be emptied as quickly for a fire-drill. The next event was in May when on the night of the third, our banquet was held in the Chamber of Commerce. We enjoyed good "eats", good speeches, good music and good everything. This event closed our social season except for our picnic wherein we again journeyed to the shores of that famous pond. All was a success despite the fact that several couples missed the last car and had to walk in. How tragic.

Juniors. Our day in L. H. S. one-half over and J. Ex. Having chosen John Longyear, President, and selected our beautiful class emblem, we settled down to studying and to wait the supreme production, February 20. And we were not disappointed. Never before in the history of the High School has such a fine J. Ex. been presented as "THE LITTLE MINISTER". Erna Bissinger and Lee Weston gave the audience at the Gladner standard acting and we can almost see those real tears of Estelle yet. Besides being such a success professionally it was one financially.

The Hop occupied the class on the evening of March the 27th, at the Masonic Temple. Mr. and Mrs. Jameson, Miss Marion Sly, and Miss Margaret Pratt were the patrons. Dainty decorations and good music gave a very enjoyable evening to the crowd. Our banquet was again held at the Chamber of Commerce the seventh of May. Pretty programs of gray which each one autographed for his neighbor made a distinct feature. Interspersing the speeches of the various members of the class and faculty, Mr. Hoge played, interpreting his music humorously, a feature which certainly took well.

Robert Thayer, our athletic manager, presented the class with a basket ball banner which our boys in several hard fought battles won over the other classes. Old Pine Lake certainly has its charms for in June it was again able to draw forth a goodly number of picnicians. Probably for the first time in history there was more ice cream than could be eaten. Even though Mr. Hoge spoiled a new pair of trousers by reposing on a dish of pickles every one had a good time.

327 and 330 were barely able to hold the seniors at the beginning of the year a fact to which "Pete" Gray and certain others will testify. Elections were very exciting this year for both class officers and Oracle Board, the chances being more evenly divided than usual. Richard Simon became our fourth president and immediately appointed the committees to have charge of the year's work. One of these, an informal party committee with Elsa Foote at its head gave us a pleasant evening in the Gymnasium on Jan 14th. Everyone wanted more of this kind of affair even "Mac" who took off the honors for the evening with his solo dance. The big party of the year though was the Senior Hop held March 5th at the Women's Club House at which Phil Diamond's orchestra played. Many favor dances broke up the evening pleasantly. Mr. and Mrs. LeFurge, Mr. and Mrs. Traehsel, and Mr. and Mrs. Legg were patrons for this jolly affair.

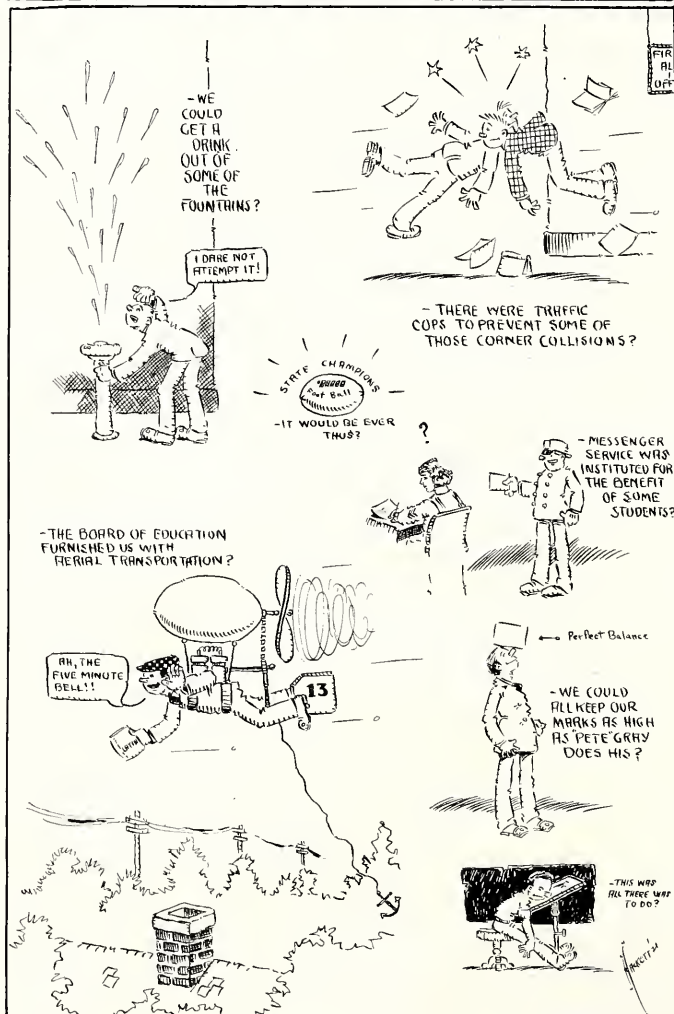

Leila Harris and Charles Betts perfectly upheld the dramatic honor of the class, gained from the year before, in our Senior pageant April 15th. "The Light" certainly was a gorgeous affair!

And here we must stop to publish this "Oracle" but the future holds another banquet on May 6, possibly another picnic, the coming out of this book and finally graduation ending in commencement, June 16 at Prudden Auditorium.

"A fine class", we are proud to think of ourselves. In the future may the old spirit and pep and true class feeling hold us constantly together.

WOULDN'T IT BE GREAT IF -

Elsa's Diary

By Elsa Foote and Barrett Lyons

(Being the prophecy of the class of 1921)

Monday, September 15, 1941.

Here I am in dear old Lansing after twenty years in Cambridge. I am so glad Dorothy Collins Longyear has invited me to stay with her this week. She says she has something planned for me every day that I am to be here. Can you imagine John a minister? A Baptist minister? It is difficult to do so! The Lansing of today with its population of 160,000 and its twenty-two storied sky-scrapers does not resemble the old Lansing of 1921. Mrs. Douglas Lockwood (Marjorie Parker) is giving a tea for me this afternoon and Barbara Langenbacher has invited me to the Auditorium this evening to hear Viola Drumm, the internationally famed pianist.

Had a wonderful time at Marjorie's tea. Since Douglas is an interior decorator their home, of course, is beautiful. Elizabeth Nutting, as usual, a social leader, was there besides several others of the class of '21. Was so glad to see again Helen Hands and Marjorie Essick, I will not attempt to remember their married names, and Eva Buermann, worrying to death for fear that she is growing fat, also Dorothy Lott as jolly as ever.

On the way to the Auditorium in the evening I noticed the familiar name of Donald Simmons on a haberdashery window and saw Loretta Sweeney and Frances Petrie coming out of their bird shop. Barbara says that customers who have bought a parrot in their shop complain of its incessant jabbering. A little further on I could not help but notice the neat sign, "Daschner's Beauty Parlor For Men". Over Crotty's Book Store is "Frank Cummings Prop."

The concert was excellent. I was surely proud that Viola belongs to the class of '21. On the way out I passed Mr. and Mrs. Berthol Nichols with the sweetest little girl they called Helen, and also Leola Strobel with two or three other school teachers.

Wednesday 17.

Went shopping early yesterday morning. Stopped in the bank to get a check cashed and whom should I behold in the President's booth but Rowland Stebbins talking to his wife. Odette recognized me and walked over to the Lawrason Drug Store with me. Dick DeMerrel strolled in to buy a cigar and I could hardly wait until he was gone to ask Odette what he was doing now. "My goodness," she said, "Didn't you know that Erma broke their engagement before she moved to California and that he has been a bachelor ever since? He lives alone out on Moore's River Drive." I went with Odette to Mrs. Betts Oriental Rug Shop. As Charles is a professor at M. A. C. Dorothy is helping him out with her little store. After selecting two magnificent rugs Odette took me to lunch at Anne Heyman's Tea Rooms where we met Gerald Baker who asked us to go for a ride in his new aeroplane which was up on the roof. We gladly assented as I had not been in one since leaving Cambridge. While outside of town Odette pointed out to me the large poultry farm of Celia North and two farms owned by Ada Kieppe and Henry Inms. On the way in we passed over the sugar beef factory and the city gas works, owned by Burdette Sloan and Daryl Minnis respectively, so Odette said. Very appropriately managed I thought!

In the afternoon I went over to see my old friend Beatrice Bentges who is teaching kindergarten. Gathered some bits of news. Stanley Adler and Louise Johnson are on the Detroit Free Press, Louise of course as society editor. Pete and Martha Gray have a dancing school. They have named their little daughter Pearl Geraldine McHenry—who! A slip of the pen! Geraldine Greessle is accompanist for Billy who is on the stage. Kathryn Tubbs it seems is matron of an orphan asylum in Xenia, Ohio. Oh, I musn't forget—Charlotte is private secretary for her husband Harold Gross and Andy Schoolmaster is now a comedian.

Thursday, 19.

As John had to go to East Lansing yesterday to collect some back subscriptions from some of his congregation, Dorothy and I went along for the ride. We visited Raymond Benedict, professor at M. A. C.—fruitless! Then Roderic Crane who is head of the art department—"simply impossible," John declared! I discovered during our ride the Johnson Drug Co., owned by Ewing and Torronce together. Back in Lansing we stopped in front of the Prudden building which is now fifteen stories high and on the different windows I read the following: Lee Weston, Prosecuting Attorney; R. Harris and M. Richmond, Lawyers; Forest Wyble, D. D. S. Decorating the Dancer-Brogan windows was Carrol Weed. He didn't appear as though he believed this to be a "weary world." In passing the Mich. Ins. Co. Dorothy told me that Richard Simon was it's new president. Up to his old tricks you see. During the afternoon I went over to the state building to see Florence Fuller, State Librarian. As I expected found her buried behind a pile of books. She informed me that Clara Burnes is Secretary of State and that working under her are Pauline Anstin, Leola Roberts and Christine Alzner. In the corridor I met Manley Curtiss in an officer's uniform and going down the steps was greatly surprised to find that the tall gentleman coming towards me in naval dress was Charles Silsbee.

Friday, 19.

Yesterday morning I visited Central High School. It is almost twice as large as when I graduated. It now extends nearly out to the side walk on Genesee street. Bernice Spitler, a Miss Barber, the second, is head of the English department, and Reva Leach is teaching Chemistry. Florence Hackbart is a gym teacher. Who should be coaching the football team and teaching algebra, but Elton Neller? For a day or so his wife, Frances Wimble, I think she used to be, is taking Dorothy Schaibly's place as a geometry teacher.

Barrett Lyons and his wife invited a jolly crowd of old school friends out to their country home last evening. The party included Stanley Fulton, who is engineering a canal from Grand Rapids to Detroit, thru Lansing. Amy Edmonds who is an enthusiastic social worker, the Wickhams, Stewart by the way has succeeded to his father-in-law's C. P. L. cigar business. Others there were Rear Admiral Hackett, home on a leave, and his wife, Estelle, Lucille Gardner, head dietitian at Battle Creek Sanitarium and Abie Simon, politician, with Miss Mildred Kyes, running for Mayor. I never spent such an interesting evening in my life. I learned that Marian Cowperthwait is a teacher of English in the University of Paris, Abie said that Donald Brown had just been appointed Secretary of Agriculture to fill a vacancy in the cabinet. Estelle received a letter yesterday morning from Erma Bissinger, in which she said she had been in Los Angeles recently to the Chautauqua and heard Marian Greenaway give an excellent talk. She had also seen Robert Thayer, an oil speculator, and Naomi Lewis, the second Louise Fazenda in the movies. Mildred asked me if I knew Margaret Shadduck was Editor of the Literary Digest? I discovered Ruth Jenning's latest book, "The Broken Knot" on the library table. Finally Barrett got the children's ouija board. Stanley had a funny twinkle in his eye and the following answers and names are singularly apropos. Mildred Isbell, Modiste in Detroit; Henry Duff, Ambassador to Turkey; Leila Harris, Elocutionist; John Moliter, scientific explorer for the National Geographic; Ailene Gilbert, Missionary in India; Goldeen Reese, interpreter in China; our old football captain, Rollie, National Boy's Work Secretary; Cottrell Reed, wholesale fruit dealer in Grand Haven; Richard Hewitt, cartoonist; and Dorothy Vandercook, married to an easterner.

Saturday, 20.

Here I am in the train on my way back to Cambridge to again resume my sculpturing. I wouldn't have missed this visit to Lansing for anything in the world. I'm surely coming back for the next reunion of the best class that ever graduated from Lansing High School, dear old class of '21!

Mr. Rockwood: What was DeWitt Clinton that he could put thru such a tremendous project as the Erie Canal?

Grace Baxter: He was a Republican.

Mr. Rockwood: What terrible ordeal did Whitman go through for the sake of Oregon?

Warner Canberg: He got married.

Remarkable Facts by Brilliant (?) Students
From Mr. McKale's Intelligence Test

Fitz says: Chard is a fish (Perhaps a vegetable sardine.)

"Chuck" Silsbee says: Napoleon defeated the Austrians at Waterloo. (We'll say "Chuck" met his Waterloo on this one.)

E. Nutting says: A mimeograph is a kind of phonograph.

(Now Liz, you know Stew never played a mimeograph when you went to his house.

Andy Schoolmaster says: Armadillo is a kind of ornamental shrub. (Andy, better rub your eyes again, you never saw a shrub walk on four legs did you?)

Gaillard Colvin says: Denim is a dance. (Perhaps, Gaillard you were confused and forgot that you ever wore overalls.)

Gerald Montgomery says: Maroon is a food. (If by chance, Monty, you know the food value of maroon, do not keep your secret hidden. It may mean your fortune.)

A few said: Gen. Lee surrendered at Appomattox in 1886 or 1812. (No wonder history teachers have exams.)

Among the physics sharks (?) that haunt the laboratory are "Dick" DeMerrell, Lee Weston and Bob Thayer. They have endeavored to master the intricate parts of physics and during their investigations they have come to two new laws which are now made public for the first time. Law No. 1—The flatter the plate the lesser the soup. Law No. 2—The darker the night the greater the pressure. Note: All these laws have been proved time and time again by the above trio.

The next morning after an English 5 Class had been told to study "The Wreck of the Hesperus" the last thing before going to bed, and then to sleep on it, Marjorie Reed said, "Did we have to learn all the poem?" "Of course," said the teacher.

Marjorie: "Well I slept on it and I'm so seasick I don't know anything."

An old farmer had been ordered by a Government Official for the county district to collect his stock of every description and have them branded.

"I s'pose that's all right," sighed the farmer, "but, honest mister, b'lieve me I'm going to have a good time with them bees."

"Pete" Gray—Sometimes you talk to me as if my head were solid ivory.

Mr. Legg—Why, Pete, do you think it is as valuable as all that?

Judge—You are charged with simple theft.

Accused—Simple, I'd like to see you do it.

Pat was digging a hole when the boss passed by. "Well, Pat," said he, "do you think you will be able to get all that dirt back into the hole again?"

Pat looked thoughtfully at the pile of dirt and then at the hole and said, "No, sor, Sure, I don't think I've dug the hole deep enough."

Mr. Leach—I just read of two girls getting lost in the Alps in midwinter.

Mrs. Leach—Terrible! Were they frozen to death?

Mr. Leach—No, they warmed themselves on mountain ranges.

"Chuck" Silsbee (on sea trip)—Ah, isn't the salt air bracing The sea is good for a man.

"Ted" Hackett (sickly)—Yes, it certainly calls forth the best that is in you.

"I am sorry, madam," replied the conductor. "I can't do that, even if you were the director's only wife."

A drunkard of long standing has been reformed by an operation which removed a bone that pressed against the brain. Newspapers report many cures effected by the removal of a brass rail that was pressing on the foot.

With deep anguish he begged her to reconsider her answer. "If you don't marry me, Millie, I'll blow my brains out."

"Oh, come now, don't do anything as rash as that. "But—but," she reflected softly, "that would be a good joke on father, for he thinks you haven't any."

THE TEST OF A MAN

The test of a man is the fight that he makes,

The grit that he daily shows,

The way he stands on his feet and takes

Fate's numerous bumps and blows.

A coward can smile when there's naught to fear,

When nothing his progress bars;

But it takes a man to stand up and cheer

When some other fellow stars.

It isn't the victory, after all,

But the fight that a brother makes.

The man who, driven against the wall

Always ready for a little fun, he replied, "This is the smartest man in the city." The child mumbled for a moment and replied, "I beg pardon, sir, it is the wrong number," and hung up.

"Is this 1602J?"

"It is."

Still stands up erect and takes
The blows of Fate with his head held high,
Bleeding and bruised and pale,
Is the man who will win in the by and by,
For he isn't afraid to fall.
It's the bumps you get and the jolts you get,
And the shocks your courage stands,
The hour of sorrow and regret,
The prize that escaped your hands,
That test your mettle and prove your worth,
It isn't the blows you deal,
But the blow you take on the good old earth
That shows if your stuff is real.

Suppose YOU have a FIRE tonight?

With all his strength behind the hit, he scarcely feels the shock

MEN on first and third! The pitcher winds up! The ball speeds toward the batter at the rate of more than a mile a minute and he hits it hard enough to send it over four hundred feet—yet he doesn't stop and wring his hands as if in pain. He's off like a flash for first.

He scarcely feels the terrific impact of his hit because his bat is made of wood, and wood is flexible—it gives a little, it cushions and absorbs the shocks of batting.

Just as wood bats protect players from fatigue and injury, so wood wheels protect automobiles and trucks from crashing, deadly road shocks. On wood wheels motorists drive with confidence, secure in the knowledge that the elasticity and give of wood wheels also absorb the terrific side thrusts which must be met entirely by the wheels.

And so from wood grown in our own timber lands in the south, cut by our own logging gangs, rough turned in our own mills, seasoned in our own kilns, shaped in our own woodworking plants and fitted with steel parts made in our own pressed steel plant, the Motor Wheel Corporation makes wood wheels for automobiles and trucks—at the rate of four thousand sets a day—four million wheels a year.

Success*

Successful men never neglect their appearance. They know that being smart includes looking smart, and that for distinction, for impression, there is nothing like tailored-to-order clothes made of pure wool fabrics.

A Graduation Gift

A most appropriate way of remembering your friends about to graduate is to present Bank Accounts as graduation gifts.

A gift of his kind almost invariably develops and strengthens the good habits of systematic thrift and economy.

When love gets a camera that will make snap-shots by moonlight it will be able to photograph the ideal woman.

Beggar—Can you help a poor man out? I need bread.

Wise One— You will have to be a little more explicit. Do you need bread or knead bread? In other words, are you a beggar who loafs, or a loafer who begs?

Practical Co-operation

The Union Building & Loan Association receives money from one set of patrons and loans the funds to others on the security of real estate in and about Lansing.

These operations are carried on with every precaution for safety and at a very small expense. It therefore can loan money at fair rates and distribute good profits to its investors.

Money may be left in lump sums because the very best system for saving is at your command. Any number of quarters per week will bring just that number of hundreds of dollars in a little over six years. Look us up.
